1.3.1 The Institution integrates cross-cutting issues relevant to gender, environment and sustainability, human values, health determinants, Right to Health and emerging demographic issues and Professional Ethics into the Curriculum as prescribed by the University / respective regulative Councils

Response:

Sincere efforts are made by DUPHMC to incorporate gender equality, environmental sustainability, human values, and professional ethics into the curriculum in order to foster ambidextrous personalities. With equal opportunities are given to female & male students. The faculty encourages them to take part in a variety of programmes. The Committee was established to address concerns pertaining to women's safety. Students' development of gender and social equality is fostered through a variety of course-related modules, such as Workshop: Sustainability and the Environment To make students aware of the risks associated with climate change, seasonal deregulation, ecological distortion, biodiversity and its effects on the social and economic sphere, and other environmental threats, a number of seminars, workshops, and environmental days are held. Students are exposed to ideas and thoughts about sustainability and development through field trips to dairy farms, water filtration plants, tree plantations, vanmohatsav programmes, swachata abhiyaan, water conservation initiatives, solar power systems, and E-vehicle charging stations.

The human principles that set humanity apart from animal kingdom are the foundation of human values. At DUPHMC, to develop the aspiring homoeopaths into nearly ideal human beings who can uncover their own reason for selecting the honorable medical profession. Trellis Institute Nasik organizes session on ethical education. Another programme like this is the participative workshop, which aims to broaden and improve students' understanding of human values and related traits.

Professional Ethics: on order to better assist the patients, first-year students receive training on professional ethical standards. IInd year students are taught medical jurisprudence. In order to strengthen their soft skills, third- and fourth-year students record patient data in a courteous and scientific manner. Students practice ethics during their internships.

Factors Affecting Health A person's state of mind, which is reflected in their behavior patterns, the influence of society on their mind and body, and the impact of both biological and non-biological variables on their body all work together to define their overall state of health. Our small campus with few facilities fosters a culture of harmony, respect for one another, and optimism. Students have access to transport. Through evaluation, each student's strengths are strengthened by the first year itself.

The rights to well-being all people have the inherent right to perfect holistic health, regardless of their gender, race, or social status. Modern medical facilities are available, including free on-site admittance, X-ray, ECG, sonography, and OPD. The college canteen offers wholesome and sanitary meals, clean drinking water, and well-ventilated classrooms, restrooms, and a recreation area to boarding students.

New Concerns in Demography Emerging concerns are taken into account, including those related to women's health, cancer, TB, air and waterborne illnesses, and pandemics like COVID. Numerous programmes are arranged in the form of cancer, mother-child, and medical camps.
